

Brief of Work

My work shows the relationship between the speaker's grandmother and the speaker. The title of the poem is "Tiny Scissors", and my artwork depicts a grandmother who is holding a pair of scissors with another girl – the speaker. They are cutting food into small pieces. The cuisine they are preparing is ginger pork intestines, a Hakka delicacy that the speaker made with her grandmother. For the grandmother's clothes, I drew the pattern of my school bag, which my grandmother bought for me. Additionally, I drew the table as the world because I believe that when family members have each other, they have the world.

Nowadays, many teenagers find their parents' "nagging" annoying and do not want to talk to them in a friendly manner or engage in conversations. In my artwork, as I portray the loving relationship between the speaker and her grandmother, I hope that all teenagers can cherish the people around them, including their family members, teachers and friends.
