

Brief of Work

My work shows the view of urbanisation. The main colour, grey, represents cement and the loss of vitality. During the rapid development of cities, people start living like hermits and become cut off from the outside world. I drew a city that looks like a bird's nest comprising rebar and cement. Although all the things are colourless, there is a hint of colour on the buildings, which symbolises warmth and life.