

Brief of Work

The artwork shows some concrete buildings which are our “homes”. Like what the poem says, there are no colours in the modern concrete at first. However, when people return home, they turn the lights on, and the light shines through the modern concrete. When people spend their time on the bridge with friends and family, the happiness and joyfulness turn the colourless modern concrete into one with rainbow colours, which is reflected in the river. With more and more people returning home, the colourless modern concrete becomes more and more beautiful because of the lights and warmth in our homes.
