Sharks Need Us

In tanks of glass so clear and bright,
Our sharks move past in the city light.
Though they are attractive for our sight,
Their real home needs our might!
Hong Kong's seas harm their precious life,
With fins that danced through waves so rife.
Now plastic chokes and nets run strife,
We must cut this terrible knife!
No matter the action, big or small,
We must answer this 'urgent call'.
Reduce the waste, protect the blue,
For sharks and all life depends on you!
Sharks are in danger, feeling hopeless,
Yet, we can save them from darkness.
Losing their lives is heartbreaking.
Together, we bear the charge of helping.
