Leaps of Persistence

The dolphin show is so much fun,
My favorite thing beneath the sun.
They jump so high and do flips,
Then from their nose a ball will tip.

Swimming under the sunlight,
Through waves that excite,
With every leap, a pure delight,
Painting the water with silver, sheer and bright.

Gray and white,
A flash in the blue light.
They are as brave as knights,
Active day and night.

And though the waves may push them down,
They never wear a waiting frown.
They surge back up to reach the height.
A lesson in enduring light.
